"Early in the Winter, I took a severe cold which developed into an obstinate, hacking cough, very painful to endure and troubling me day and night, for nine weeks, in spite of numerous remedies. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral being recommended me, I began to take it, and inside of 24 hours, I was relieved of the tickling in my throat. Before I finished the bottle, my cough was nearly gone. I cannot speak too highly of its excellence."—Mrs. E. BOSCH, Eaton, Ohio.

BABY LOUISE.

I'm in love with you, Baby Louise!
With your silken hair and your soft brown eyes,
And the dreamy wisdom that in them lies,
And the faint, sweet smile you brought from the skies,
God's sunshine, Baby Louise.

When you fold your hands, Baby Louise,
Your hands like a fairy's, so tiny and fair,
With a pretty, innocent, saintlike air,
Are you trying to think of some angel taught prayer
You learned above, Baby Louise?

I'm in love with you, Baby Louise,
Why, you never raise your beautiful head!
But some day, little one, your cheek will grow red
With a flush of delight to hear the words said,
I "love you," Baby Louise.

Do you hear me, Baby Louise?
I've sung your praises for nearly an hour.
Yet your dark fringed eyelids droop lower and lower,
And you've gone to sleep, like a weary flower,
Ungrateful Baby Louise!
—Margaret Eytinge in Detroit Free Press.

DELAYED DISPATCH.

I had never been left alone in charge of the office before. It was a cold, blustery day in January, one of those dreary winter days that make one feel so melancholy and blue, the wind shrieking about the building and the snow falling thickly in great white flakes, which seemed to be vying with each other for a comfortable spot on which to fall when reaching the friendly bosom of earth. Old Sol had not favored us with a smile all day, but had sulkily hidden his face behind the gray restless clouds. It was truly a dismal afternoon.

The office building in which I was domiciled was one of those dreary old country stations which seemed to be dropped along the side of the railroad track at intervals without an effort at making them other than what they are, both uncomfortable and unsightly.

The little town of B—— was a sleepy little village of about 900 inhabitants, built down in a valley, surrounded by hills, from which flowed an abundance of beautiful, clear, pure spring water, supplying the humble, contented citizens. Today the place presented a picturesque appearance. The snow had been falling heavily during the night, and the trees, fences, housetops, bushes and streets were completely covered with the "beautiful."

The principal street of the village ended at the foot of the long winding hill which served as a coasting place for the merry young people. The only sign of life about the place this memorable afternoon was the occasional jingle of sleighbells wafted to my ears on the frosty air as some farmer's boy took advantage of the deep snow to exhibit his new sleigh, and a merchant now and then coming to the station for his small shipments. One or two disconsolate looking tramps passed my office, trudging along through the snow, casting an envious glance in my direction as I sat in the bow window.

This cold wintry day, as I sat in the little office listening intently to the tick of the two instruments on the table in front of me, little did I dream that it was to be the one eventful day of my life. Looking from the windows, I could see east and west of me the straight line of track stretching away like two silver reptiles running side by side over a vast white sheet. A short distance north of the office was the old woolen mill of Bartlet & Sons, from which issued the sound of the merry wheels as they hummed in busy unison with the click of the looms, keeping company with my wandering thoughts.

At a distance of perhaps a quarter of a mile on each side of my office were two curves, preventing my seeing a train approach the station from either direction until the shrill whistle of the engine called for my signal or down brakes.

I had just learned telegraphy, or thought I had, having studied it about four months, and had become proficient enough, as my sanguine teacher avowed, to fill the place with perfect safety while he made a pleasure trip to Louisville, the center of gravity for him. I remember I had serious misgivings as to my ability to take care of the office work and sat with tears trembling on my eyelashes long after the train bearing my only assistance had disappeared and felt very much depressed, as though on the eve of some great calamity.

To throw off this dreadful feeling I walked to the waiting room and back several times, humming a popular air to keep up my spirits. I think I had been thus occupied an hour or so when I heard the train dispatcher at "M." giving an order to the operator at Wilmington for No. 48, a freight train coming east. It read: "Train No. 48, engine 236, has until eleven ten (11:10) a. m. to run to Raysville for No. 11, engine 245.—R. G. L."

I went to the table and copied the order as it was given, simply doing so to pass the time, and heard the operator at Wilmington receive it and give the signatures of both conductor and engineer of No. 48, the dispatcher giving him the correct time. Then I noted Wilmington reporting No. 48 out of his station at 10:40 a. m. After an interval of half an hour or so the operator at "M." asked if there were any orders for No. 111, receiving a negative answer from the dispatcher. All this I noted casually, not thinking for a moment that it had the slightest interest for me, other than something to copy, and in blissful ignorance that we were on the verge of a terrible catastrophe.

In a few moments, while lazily gazing west from my window, I saw a hazy, dark mist curling up over the snow capped trees in the distance, which looked very much like smoke from an engine, and while I was conjecturing as to what it might mean I heard the signal for my target as it sung around the curve into sight. It struck me as being exceedingly strange that No. 48, a freight train, was running to "M.," regardless of the limited, and I concluded to inform the dispatcher of the unusual situation, telling him "No. 48 is coming." He answered "O. K.," and then I gave them my signal to go ahead. Just as they were rounding the east curve, the caboose just disappearing, "M." called me and asked, "Is No. 48 on the siding?" I told him "No;" that they had just left the station, giving the time they had passed.

His reply: "My God, has No. 48 gone? No. 111 is pulling out. They will collide. Can't you get No. 48?" My hair felt as though it was raising off my head, chills chased themselves up and down my spine, and the cold perspiration poured down my pallid cheeks as I rushed with all speed and less grace from the office and frantically waved a white apron I wore and which I tore off as I ran, but the crew of the freight failed to look back as the caboose sailed round the curve, and my heart almost failed me as I realized that the only hope now was to catch No. 111 before they left "M."

I ran back into my office and sank into a chair, no longer able to stand on my feet, scarcely breathing until in a few—hours it seemed to me, but in reality—seconds the dispatcher called me, saying, "We've got No. 11." Were ever words so sweet to mortal ears? The tick of that little brass sounder as it rang those words through the room was like sweet music, so welcome were they to me.

How did they get No. 111? I will tell you. When I told the dispatcher that No. 48 was beyond recall, he opened a window in mad haste and screamed to the people on the platform below him, "For God's sake, stop that train!" And they, realizing that something was terribly wrong, rushed after the rapidly disappearing train, frantically waving handkerchiefs and umbrellas, screaming like madmen, finally attracting the attention of the rear brakeman just as No. 111 was going out of sight and hearing. They backed up on a siding and waited, and soon the freight train pulled into "M." station, the crew as unconcerned as though they had not just escaped a smashup and the possibilities of instant death a few moments before.

A white faced operator, with trembling lips, leaned out of the window and asked them, "Haven't you forgotten something?" And the forgotten order was suddenly remembered, but too late for them.

The whole crew was of course discharged, and I—well, when those welcome words were ticked off that dear old sounder, telling me that No. 111's crew and passengers were safe, I lost consciousness and only came back to life in time to hear the conductor of No. 111 say to his engineer: "Poor girl, she has fainted. She is almost frightened to death."

Had I not warned the dispatcher in time for him to catch the passenger train, there would have been a horrible collision, and we can only picture to ourselves the horrors accompanying such a catastrophe.

My reward was a position with the company and a handsome gold watch. I staid with the company but a short time, however, for I never could cure myself of the horror I had of railroad telegraphing produced by my terrible experience that wintry day in January, and as I write this story, sitting here in my cozy little sitting room by a bright coal fire, watching the flames creeping around the black diamonds in the grate, as I go over the scenes and situations of that dreary afternoon, I shudder and wonder if old Father Time will ever enable me to forget that dreadful experience, so that I can speak of it all without a shudder.—Northwest Magazine.

Russian Traits.

The Russians are lazy and effeminate. In the winter they seldom walk, and when they do so they crawl along, muffled up in furs, and do not move with any briskness. One sees a great many military officers in Moscow, and their want of smartness is noticeable. Numbers are always to be seen lounging about the boulevards with their hands in the pockets of their gray overcoats. These boulevard warriors do not look very formidable. The Cossacks are dirty looking ruffians, badly dressed and mounted on small horses, which are said to be excellent animals, possessing wonderful staying power. I was told by an officer that the Cossacks have degenerated very much and have been spoiled by being turned into regulars. The Cossacks of the Don especially have deteriorated, but those of the Caucasian regions are fine soldiers.

One of the worst characteristics of the Russians is their dishonesty in trade. In Moscow, even in many of the best shops, one has to bargain for purchases, as a much higher price than is expected is always asked. In this way foreigners in Moscow no doubt frequently pay three or four times the necessary price for articles. In the same way one has to bargain for everything, and this, in my opinion, constitutes one of the most disagreeable things connected with life in Russia. One always imagines that one is being swindled, and too frequently, no doubt, the idea is not a vain one.

That the Russians are a dirty people is well known. Very few houses have even a footbath in them, and although there are fine public baths the Russians, even of the upper classes, seldom make use of them. Indeed I believe the lower orders are cleaner in this respect. —Westminster Review.

His Broken Rest.

It seems the tax collector had been diligently searching for Oscar a considerable time when one morning he discovered the descendant of the O'Flahertys issuing from his house in Tite street. The collector demanded certain payments, which Oscar refused to make.

"But, Mr. Wilde, this is your house. You occupy it. I've just seen you coming out of it. You must live there."

"Most positively I do not."

"At any rate," retorted the now slightly exasperated man, "you do what legally constitutes living in the house. You sleep there. You don't deny that."

"But, my dear man," Oscar answered languidly, stifling a yawn, 'you must consider I sleep so badly."—Chap Book.

"WHY SO SAD, WILLIE?"

A London Police Court Incident That Made Even Lady Somerset Laugh.

All London is laughing now over a bit of testimony that was given in the hearings on Lady Henry Somerset's crusade against the London music halls. Not to be behind our own Dr. Parkhurst when he began his crusade, Lady Henry Somerset determined to take the bull by the horns and collect evidence herself. She secured another lady as zealous as herself as a companion, and the pair obtained the services of a young curate of their acquaintance as male escort.

Now, it happens that Lady Somerset is a woman of very generous proportions and withal so handsomely made that some of the ungodly have been wicked enough to suggest that her ladyship would make an enchanting living picture herself. It chanced also that the lady who was to accompany her was of a similarly generous build, if anything rather the larger of the two. On the other hand, the young curate was slight and weazened, with a pale, mild face, that bore a perpetual air of melancholy.

The trip was made, and when the detective party was placed upon the stand during the hearing the justice asked her ladyship if in her travels about in the slums she had been molested or accosted in any offensive way. Lady Henry was compelled to reply that she had not, but that, on the contrary, she had rather respectful treatment. Her companion gave similar testimony.

When the little curate took the stand, the judge asked the same question of him—if he had been accosted.

"Yes," replied the little man in a shrill voice, "and very offensively too."

"Well," said the judge, "what did the women say to you?"

"Well, sir," the curate declared, with comical indignation, "in one of the music halls a couple of women came up to me, and one of them brazenly chucked me under the chin and said, 'Why so sad, Willie?'"

Even Lady Henry Somerset could not suppress her laughter.—New York Herald.

BACTERIOLOGY.

This Bacillus Business Has Spread So as to Make Us All a Little Nervous.

Of Campbell's lives of the lord chancellors, in the succession of which there was a possibility that he might himself appear, Lord Brougham said that it had added a new terror to death. Life has been so stuffed with new terrors by the bacteriologist that there is hardly room for another, and beside him the most prolix and prosaic historian and biographer becomes an innocent and harmless figure indeed. There is hardly any physiological or moral condition which is not now fitted with its bacillus, the proportion and structure of that microscopic reptile being given with diabolical accuracy and verisimilitude. It would really be a relief not to know quite so much of the minute organizations which accompany morbid pathological states if there were any way of escaping it. The doctors have to know, of course, but the knowledge might be confined to them, as the sacerdotal mysteries used to be to the priesthood. It would save no end of popular anxiety and alarm. With every symptom the patient is now assured that he is assailed by a new and virulent micrococcus, and the constantly published researches of the microscopists tend to inflame his imagination and increase his alarm.

Here is an Italian bacteriologist who says he has discovered the bacillus of old age, and when he has found out the right sort of salt to put on its tail its ravages will be at an end, and old age, as a condition, will pass away, subsisting only as a theory or remote retrospect. He has not yet disclosed the structural outlines of this curious reptilian debutante, and it may be only an after dinner vision, to which science will deny a recognized place, leaving old age, as it was before, an incurable condition, with an invariably progressive tendency, in no need of bacteria to accelerate it.—New York Tribune.

Colored Floridians In Clover.

Nothing will kill a young negro but a charge of dynamite, and their stomachs must be wonderfully and fearfully made. The freeze was an unmitigated blessing to them, and they luxuriated on frozen oranges for two weeks afterward. It was fun to see them. They would gather around the various shipping points, and when a lot of fruit was ordered to the cremator they would help themselves before it was hauled away. Some of the boys would eat two dozen frozen oranges at a sitting, or standing, rather, and the feat did not seem to harm them in the slightest. Some of the bootblacks and newsboys made a point of buying 5 cents' worth of frozen oranges every day for their dinner. They could get a dozen large ones for a nickel, and they would eat them way down to the yellow hide. A white boy who attempted the same performance would have had several different kinds of cramp colic in less than 15 minutes. —Florida Times-Union.

Hears With His Mouth.

A boy whose mouth is wonderful, in that it does the double service of tasting and hearing, was in San Antonio today. His name is John Miband, and his home is at Sabinal. He was born ten years ago. Both ears were closed at birth, and they have never been of service to him. But by a remarkable freak of nature his mouth has done what his ears ought to have done, and he is not incommoded in the slightest. Several local doctors examined and tested the powers of the mouth and pronounced the case a phenomenon without a parallel.—San Antonio (Tex.) Dispatch.

Our Actors.

It is a remarkable fact that most of the so called Irish comedians in this country are Americans, and most of the English actors are Irish.—New Orleans Picayune.

Is Life Worth Living?

That depends upon the Liver. If the Liver is inactive the whole system is out of order—the breath is bad, digestion poor, head dull or aching, energy and hopefulness gone, the spirit is depressed, a heavy weight exists after eating, with general despondency and the blues. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.

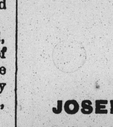

I have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. Have tried forty other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, and none of them gave more than temporary relief, but the Regulator not only relieved but cured.

FACT AND FANCY,

BY JEDWIN NEWAME.

Were the people of this State animated with the nobility and loftiness that marked the grand days of Greece, a pæan of praise and thanksgiving would be rendered to Almighty God. The Octapus with its slimy tentacles has been defeated; would it were dead. Conscious of its baleful strength, it has, whenever opportunity offered, and that has not been seldom, taken a dull delight in sapping the strength of the land. The public has not fully realized its strength. Hypnotized by the threat of tyranny it has scarce dared to speak. But though the people may for a time be browbeaten and scared they sooner or later will come to a realization of the fact that sovereignty—the power of the organized people—is supreme, though it may be turned, deceived and show little force for a time.

"God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform."

Perhaps the sullen gloom into which the State has been plunged for the past years is the precursor of a glorious dawn.

In the morning papers of March 20th there was a telegram from Seattle about Debs, President of the American Railway Union. It is interesting. Mr. Egan, President of the General Managers' Association was in Seattle at the same time and made some rather uncomplimentary remarks about Debs. The following is what Mr. Debs has to say about Egan;

"Mr. Egan is a dishonest man and a ruffian; he is a thief and he knows he is, and he knows that I know he is. He could not hold a position as flagman on any road running out of Chicago and he knows that I know why. He has been connected with many railroads and he has robbed every road and every corporation that he has ever had anything to do with. He is a corrupt, low, dishonest man and cannot conceive of any man having sufficient manhood to push aside bribes and remain true to his convictions. He does not like me because he could not corrupt me and he has no use for any man he cannot corrupt. I could have been in financial clover to-day if I had cared to become a traitor to the interests of the laboring men and the American Railway Union. I could have a life pass over all the railroads in this country."

These are pretty plain words. Mr. Debs does not talk to hear himself talk. If it be true that Egan is all that Debs says he is the General Managers' Association is in need of cleansing. In the meanwhile the United States Government is backing the General Managers' Association. In general I have no sympathy with the strike as a means of gaining an end. It accomplishes one thing, however, that the orderly ballot cannot — it brings many things to light. Among other things uncovered is the fact that the heads of railroads, that General Managers, etc., are just as human and not half as humane as the engineers, firemen, conductors and brakemen.

Governor Budd is surely treading in deep water at present. He must be careful. Two papers are doing all they can to help him in the right direction. Every day we have a good editorial on the bills in the Governor's hands. He had better take advice from other sources than those credited to him by the papers and common report.

Arthur McEwen has sized the Governor about correctly. He says he is a man of little politics and that he has ambition. Ambition has been the ruination of greater men than Budd.

It is gratifying to notice that our metropolitan police are soon to wear helmets. The brass buttons were the only distinguishing marks which they had in the past. The hats they wore looked more like the regulation high crown ministerial dicer.

The Valley Road seems to be a certainity. Last Wednesday contracts for rails, spikes, bolts and nuts were let. The contract for rails calls for 10,000 tons. Other contracts call for 720,000 pounds of spikes, 75,000 angle plates and 150,000 track bolts.

The manufacturers are in convention in San Francisco. "Patronize home industry" is the burden of their strain. It is a good slogan. If you wish an article and that article is manufactured both at home and abroad you ought to take the home article; you thus help to build up the State. But how many do just the reverse—take the foreign goods. Read the proceedings of the convention and you will know more about the resources of this State than you now do.

Harvard University has abolished foot-ball. Just why the faculty has taken this step is unknown at the present writing. Probably the alleged brutality of the game is the cause of its downfall. It is the intention of the Yale eleven to keep on training. What the ultimate effect of Harvard's action will be is difficult to state, but it undoubtedly will have a depressing influence upon the game.

Mr. Ed. Wegner desires us to publish the following extract from a letter of Chas. M. Gutfeld, of Reedley, Fresno Co., Cal., as he handles the remedy referred to and wants his customers to know what a splendid medicine it is:

"It is with pleasure I tell you that by one day's use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy I was relieved of a very severe cold. My head was completely stopped up and I could not sleep at night. I can recommend this remedy." A cold nearly always starts in the head and afterwards extends to the throat and lungs. By using this remedy freely as soon as the cold has been contracted it will cure the cold at once and prevent it from extending to the lungs.

Captain Sweeney, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy is the first medicine I have ever found that would do me any good." Price 50cts.

The World's Fair Tests showed no baking powder so pure or so great in leavening power as the Royal.

In the fall of 1893 a son of Mr. T. A. McFarland, a prominent merchant of Live Oak, Sutter county, Cal., was taken with a very heavy cold. The pains in his chest were so severe that he had spasms and was threatened with pneumonia. His father gave him several large doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy which broke up the cough and cured him. Mr. McFarland says whenever his children have croup he invariably gives them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it always cures them. He considers it the best cough remedy in the market. For sale by all dealers.

Shiloh's Cure, the great cough and croup cure, is in great demand. Pocket size contains twenty-five doses only 25cts. Children love it. Sold by druggists.

Now is the time to get a fine farm at a low price. We are offering three particular bargains this month. We have one farm for $4,000, another for $5,000 and one for $8,500. For further particulars inquire at this office.

David W. Carriger has disposed of his one-eighth interest in the Nick Carriger ranch, comprising 1,140.85 acres near this place to his brother-in-law A. T. Lewis. The consideration named in the deed is $5,000. The deed also embraces a number of lots in Sonoma, in which Mr. Carriger also held an interest. So far Mr. Lewis has acquired by purchase from the eight heirs almost the entire interest in the ranch. It is one of the finest properties in California.

The Healdsburg Enterprise entered upon a new volume last week. Editorially and otherwise the Enterprise is far above the average interior newspaper and is one of our most valued exchanges. In looking over our contemporary's advertising columns we are pleased to note that many of the people of Healdsburg believe in sustaining their local paper, which is deserving of support at the hands of every business man in that thriving town no matter what his religion or politics may be.

There is a class of people who seem to begrudge every dollar that goes to their local papers and still they will borrow it and read it and are the severest critics of its shortcomings. The publisher has to pay for labor and paper and every notice of any kind in the nature of an advertisement he ought to have his pay for. He has got to get his living out of his advertising columns and any society or individual can with just as much propriety beg five dollars of any other individual as to expect it gratuitously of a newspaper.—Vallejo Chronicle.

Robt. Pasch, agent for the celebrated Yost bicycle, which has been adopted by Zeigler, the champion wheelman of the Pacific Coast, will raffle as soon as all the chances are taken a wheel of the above make. If a lady wins the wheel she will be given a ladies' bicycle and if a gentleman wins vice versa. This raffle is so arranged that a chance may be secured for from 5 cents up to $1.50. For further particulars call upon Mr. Pasch at Schocken's store. This is one of the best opportunities ever offered in this town for securing a wheel for little or nothing. See adv. in another column.

Filippo Pezzaglia died last Saturday of old age after an illness of eight months. The deceased was the father of F. Pezzaglia, proprietor of the Swiss Hotel in this place. He came to this country from Switzerland sixteen years ago and located in Sonoma in 1884. In 1887 he visited his old home in Canton Ticino, Switzerland, where he remained two years. In 1889 he returned to California and located in Sonoma, making his home with his only son, who kindly cared for him until he died. Deceased was aged seventy years, two months and fifteen days. His remains were laid to rest Sunday in Mountain Cemetery, the funeral being largely attended by his countrymen.

HOT WATER AND GAS.

New Developments on Capt. Boyes' Place.

For some time past Capt. and Mrs. H. E. Boyes have had well-borers at work on their farm, two miles northwest of town, sinking an artesian well. On Mouday last, at a depth of seventy feet, a flowing well of hot water was struck with a temperature of 112 degrees. The water is almost hot enough to boil an egg.

Accompanying the flow of water is an immense volume of natural gas which arises in sufficient quantities to supply the entire city of Sonoma with light.

Boring operations still continues and the deeper the well-borers go down the warmer the water becomes and the greater the supply of gas. The augers as they are drawn out of the well come to the surface steaming hot. The spot where this and other previous wells have been sunk appears to be right over Hades itself and should Capt. Boyes continue to bore much further into the bowels of the earth it would not surprise us in the least to see old Nick himself pop up to the surface to cool off and inhale the balmy air of Sonoma Valley.

The spot where this well has been developed is surrounded by several warm springs, which, according to aborigine tradition, was the resort before the advent of the white man of the various Indian tribes of Northern California, who brought their sick with them to bathe in the waters of the health-giving springs. A primitive reservoir, numerous Indian relics and other signs about the springs bear out the truthfulness of the tradition.

The development of these springs, which are being carried on in a small way by Capt. Boyes, may yet lead to Sonoma Valley becoming the great sanitarium of the Pacific Coast owing to their accessibility to the metropolis, as it is well-known by many reliable residents of this valley that the waters of these springs are a sure cure for rheumatism, dyspepsia and other ailments.

Distinguished Visitors.

Samuel Jones, the brother, and Harry Gorman, a nephew of Senator John P. Jones, and several other directors of the Pacific Reclamation Company, visited the Jones ranch at McGill's Station last Wednesday. The object of the visit was to inspect the reclaimed lands south of town and to improve the drainage of the tract by substituting new flood gates in place of those having an outlet in Midshipman's slough, which have become almost useless owing to the rapid and unforseen shoaling of that stream the past few years.

Death of G. W. McIntyre.

G. W. McIntyre, for the past ten or twelve years a resident of Sonoma, died last Tuesday afternoon at his home in El Verano, where he located three years ago. Deceased had long been an invalid and for the past year was incapacitated from following his trade, that of a carpenter. For a number of months he has been kindly cared for by the Masons and the Eastern Star ladies of Sonoma, being a member of a Masonic lodge in Maine, his native State. He was sixty years of age and leaves a wife and a daughter, Mrs. Wm. Minkle.

The funeral took place Thursday afternoon under the auspices of the Masonic order, the remains being interred in Mountain Cemetery.

Rain and Crops.

Three-quarters of an inch of rain fell throughout the valley last Tuesday night. The precipitation was a most welcome one, as it insures late cultivation in our orchards and vineyards. It also gave additional life to hay and grain and feed for stock.

The frost of last week proved somewhat disastrous to apricots and there will be a very light crop. Peaches were also nipped, but being evenly distributed did not suffer so severely. In fact the frost was more of a benefit than otherwise to peaches as it thinned the fruit out quite even and will save the expense of thinning by hand.

Other fruits were not sufficiently advanced to receive injury and there will no doubt be a good crop of apples, pears, prunes and grapes, not only in this valley, but throughout the county.

A Good Recommendation.

La Fayette, Ind.—"A Mrs. Jas. Fay, living near this city, claims to have been cured by the use of Simmons Liver Regulator after five or six of the best physicians had pronounced the case hopelesss." —Albert A. Wells. Your druggist sells it in powder or liquid; the powder to be taken dry or made into a tea.

The Sonoma House is a first-class house in every respect. *

A New Game Law.

The revised game bill passed both houses of the Legislature and is now awaiting the signature of the Governor. One of the features of the new law is the creation of the office of Game Warden for each county at a salary not to exceed $100 per month. The Supervisors are to appoint the warden and are also to fix the salary.

The clause in the county government bill which allowed the Supervisors to make the open session when they pleased has been repealed. The new clause gives them power to shorten the season whenever conditions seem to warrant it.

Market hunters receive a number of hard blows in the bill. It provides that every person who buys, sells or offers for sale or trade the meat of any deer, elk, antelope or mountain sheep, whether taken or killed in this State or any other shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. The use of shotguns of larger chamber than No. 10 gauge is made unlawful and the proof of the possession of such guns in the field, marsh, bay, lake or stream shall be prima facie evidence of their illegal usage.

The new bill says in regard to hunting deer that every person in the State, who shall hunt, kill or destroy any male deer between the 15th day of October and the 15th day of July of the following year shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Female deer and spotted fawns must not be killed at any time.

Anglers will be interested in the following changes made for the protection of game and fish: Any person having striped bass of less than three pounds in weight can be punished. Black bass is protected between January 1st and July 1st. Trout of any kind must not be taken between the 1st day of November and the 1st day of April, excepting steelhead trout taken with rod and line at any time in tidewater. Trout under six inches in length must not be sold. All young fish taken from streams must be returned at once. It is stated on good authority that Governor Budd will sign the bill.—Santa Rosa Republican.

A Unique Family.

F. Pezzaglia of this place has a number of tame rabbits. Recently one of these gave birth to six little white rabbits and when they were one day old the mother rabbit died. The following day the family cat, which also had given birth to a litter of kittens—two in number—went to the dead rabbit's nest and taking its young, one by one by the nape of the neck, carried them to a large box where she was ensconced and deposited them with her two kittens. This was about a week ago, since which time the old cat has nursed and kindly cared for the six rabbits besides her own offspring. This unique family has been visited by many of our people the past week, some of whom are so ungenerous to say that the old tabby is very fly, and that when she will have raised the young rabbits suitable for eating she will make a meal of them.

Sonoma Bicycle Club.

The Sonoma Bicycle Club was organized this week in this place with a membership of twenty-one. The objects of the club are to promote bicycling and social intercourse. Monthly runs or tours will soon commence under the guidance of Mr. Geo. W. Reed, who holds the office of Captain. There are quite a number of wheels in town and scarcely a fortnight passes in which our local agents do not make a sale. There is always more pleasure in making a trip in company with others than alone so it is hoped that the objects of the club will meet with the approbation of all. The following have been elected officers to serve for one year: R. E. Perkins, President; Fred. Batto, Vice President; Geo. W. Reed, Captain; Benj. Weed, Secretary; H. H. Granice, Treasurer.

Merchant Tailor.

Conrad Futterer, well-known to many people in this valley, has opened a tailor shop on Broadway next to the Odd Fellows building. Mr. Futterer is a first-class tailor and can fit a suit of clothes like "ze paper on ze vall," and all things being equal our people should patronize him as well as every other tradesman in Sonoma—that is to say, if they don't want to see the grass growing in the streets of the town. Let us try and sustain home enterprises. The city can take care of itself.

Auction Sale.

The auction sale at the residence of Mrs. Engelbert next Wednesday afternoon, which will commence at one o'clock should be attended by every one who desires to secure a bargain in household furniture. Carpets, parlor, bed room and dining room sets and other effects must be sold no matter what the sacrifice may be.

McDonough, the genial conductor of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway, tendered him a farewell surprise party prior to his departure from their midst last Monday evening. At an early hour dancing and merry-making commenced and continued until early morn. During the evening Mr. McDonough was presented with a very handsome gold locket by his friends as a token of their respect and esteem, the presentation being made by Mr. A. R. Harrison in a feeling manner which brought tears to the eyes of many of those present. About twenty-five couple participated in the surprise. Supper was partaken of at a late hour and many toasts were given for the future health and prosperity of this kind-hearted young man and his charming wife, who had endeared themselves to the people of Glen Ellen during their five years' residence in that pretty town.

TREMENDOUS PRESSURE.

A Machine on the Hydraulic Principle, but Using Oil Instead of Water.

The reporter went the other day to see a wonderful machine, a machine which is not only a prodigious and terrible piece of engineery, but an allegory. It is called a testing machine, and it is used to ascertain the resisting power of various materials. It is not content with finding out that a beam of oak, for instance, will bear without breaking a pressure on one spot of 160,000 pounds. The beam must be utterly crushed each time the test is made, and note must be taken of the exact weight that lay upon it at the moment of its final dissolution. Day after day this great machine heaves and strains itself and bears down with slow and awful force upon some tough beam or block of wood, and whether the timber is placed flatwise and needs, say, but a paltry 75 tons to crush it, or whether it be placed endwise, like a pillar, and will hold up twice as much weight before it cries out and gives up the ghost, it must yield just the same and surrender its pitiful, crushed frame to be photographed and studied and picked to pieces for the benefit of science. That is all very interesting, you may say, but it is a mere piece of brute machinery. Where is the allegory that you told us of? That lies in the thing by the force of which this monstrous pressure is exerted. It is oil. Nothing but suave, gentle, yielding oil, the emblem of softness and agreeableness.

There is a certain piston in this mechanism which, pressing against a quantity of oil in a confined space, forces this oil against another iron surface, which in turn presses forward upon the timber so that all this crushing power is exerted by the medium of nothing but oil. As you watch the machine, even in the most exciting moment of the culmination of its crushing force, you cannot but be conscious that it is the oil that is doing it. The master stands over his great machine, his pupils grouped about. It lies down flat on its great back, like a giant bracing his shoulder against a rock to push with his feet.

The thing which he is pushing against is a beam of seasoned oak, about 10 inches square, and the thing with which he is pushing is another and lengthwise square beam of oak, the end of which is directly against the side of the beam to be crushed. Off at one side, apparently unconnected with the machine, but in reality connected with it, is an apparatus where there are levers, comparable with the throttle valve of a locomotive, and a gauge which registers accurately the pressure that is being exerted. A young learner stands at these levers and this gauge, and when the master says, "Turn on more oil," he moves a lever, and the pressure rises. Seventy thousand pounds, 80,000 pounds, it rises rapidly. The lengthwise beam is sinking itself deep into the side of the victim timber, but this still holds out bravely. The pressure rises to 90,000—100,000 pounds. The watchers all gather around the center of the pressure in anticipation of the catastrophe; the lengthwise timber is squeezing into the solid oak of the other one as one's thumb might be driven into a piece of cheese.

But still it holds. Little by little the power is turned on. The young man at the gauge calls "120,000," "130,000," "140,000," "150,000." You hear the snapping of a myriad of tendons within the beam, and all these sounds join in a sort of low buzzing roar or cry, which suggests an elemental agony. One hundred and sixty thousand pounds—the beam sinks deeper into the flesh of its victim; 170,000. "More oil!" calls the master, and now the crackle rises—the lengthwise beam itself begins to crack, and the other beam, yielding at last, seems to go to pieces all at once, and when the pressure is removed it is taken out, twisted, contorted, riven, pierced, crushed.

It is useful service, after all, though it seems but an exhibition of the brutality of mere mechanism, that the testing machine and its bed of oil have done, for since the master began the work with it he has proved that timbers will stand only about half the weight which the accepted authorities said they would stand, and by introducing a more conservative weighting of wood he has doubtless saved many human lives from destruction by the collapse of timbered structures.—Boston Transcript.

Newfoundland.

Not only have her mother and sisters been unkind, but even the elements of nature have been spiteful to Newfoundland. A fog worse than the London veil continually frowns upon her shores. The fiercest storms of the continent buffet her. Sinister icebergs hover about her harbors and threaten her fishing craft. Frequent conflagrations make havoc with her antique, combustible buildings, making her poverty still more grinding. Though Newfoundland is bigger than Ireland and nearly as large as all New England, very little of her territory is of use to her. The interior is either marshy or rocky, and the difficulty of building roads through such a country keeps back agriculture. Untold mineral riches, however, are believed to be awaiting development, and her untouched beds of peat are sufficient to supply with good fuel many times the population of the colony.

The cod is the great bulwark of provincial prosperity. The seal comes next, for Bering sea is not the only home of this animal. The fish industry is so predominant that the pedestrian on the sidewalks of the coast towns passes under an endless arbor of drying fish.—Boston Transcript.

A Dumas Anecdote.

In the days of his affluence some one came to Dumas pere for 50 sous to help bury a friend.

"What was he?" inquired Dumas.

"A bailiff, sir," answered the borrower.

Dumas' eyes lit with memories. He ran to his desk and returned with a note, which he thrust into the man's hand: "You say it costs 50 sous? Here are 100. Bury two of 'em!"

USES UP ALL ENERGY

THE CLIMATE IN THE TROPICS MAKES ONE INDOLENT.

Energy Is Not Indigenous to the Region, and the Imported Article Soon Withers. Experience of a Traveler Who Was Determined to See the Country.

"Energy doesn't grow down there. I've been in the country long enough to discover that fact," he exclaimed as he cut off a generous piece of rare roast beef.

The vigor with which he spoke and the evident relish with which he masticated the beef left the impression that the speaker had never spent any considerable time in any place where energy was scarce. He had just landed from a Panama steamer, having come from San Francisco by that route, and had made short visits to various Mexican and Central American ports.

"Not only is it not indigenous to the country, but the exotic article always withers and almost always dies," he said after the keen edge of his appetite had worn off. Then he ordered a pot of coffee, lighted a cigar and continued:

"After we sailed from San Diego it was several days before we arrived at another port. We crossed the gulf of California and touched at Mazatlan, in Mexico. I had promised myself that I should go ashore and see every town at which we stopped in Mexico and Central America, so when the fleet of native boats surrounded the ship a party of passengers hired one, and we were soon on our way to the shore. The distance from the place where the ship was anchored to shore was about three miles, and before the distance had been half covered I was impatient and thoroughly disgusted with the lazy movements of the native oarsmen. Our time was limited, too, and that increased my irritation, because I was anxious to see all I possibly could of the place within a short time.

"I jumped ashore at last and hurried up to the town first to the postoffice and then to other points of interest. It was in the middle of the day, and the sun beat down and reflected again from the white house and the streets, which were paved with small cobblestones. Scarcely a person was on the street, except the people from the ship. The natives lounged about in their shops or the secluded courts with which each house is supplied. The shopkeepers were invariably smoking cigarettes, and it was with difficulty that I induced one of them to rise from his indolent position to supply me with some small purchase which I wished to make.

"Walking rapidly from the postoffice through the principal street to the cathedral, and then to the markets, and again to the public square, I was in a perspiration before I realized it. But my soul was filled with contempt for the lounging, lazy natives, who, it seemed to me, could do nothing except smoke cigarettes, rest their heads on their hands and feebly say, 'Manana' (tomorrow). I saw everything there was to be seen and found the party at the landing impatiently waiting my arrival, so they could return to the ship. While I had done the town thoroughly, I had to admit to myself that I had never been so tired in my life as I was when I reached the deck of the City of Sydney and stretched myself in a steamer chair to smoke and think over what I had seen.

"My spirits revived when we got under way again and had the benefit of an ocean breeze. I renewed my determination to see all the towns at which we touched, and see them thoroughly. We dropped anchor again a day or so later, and I promptly made a bargain with one of the natives to take me ashore. For some inexplicable reason I did not feel half the irritation at the slow movements of the oarsmen that I had felt at the first port. I lounged back in the boat and smoked and was almost lulled to sleep by the movement of the boat as it rose and fell on the long ocean swells.

"When I reached the shore, however, I shook off the lethargy and started briskly out on my sightseeing trip. When I reached the public square, my enthusiasm began to show signs of 'petering out.' With difficulty I tore myself away from a tempting shady seat and visited the few places of interest. Then I went back to the boat, and although I reached the ship an hour ahead of the time set for departure I found that all the passengers had returned ahead of me.

"I was determined to see as much of the country as possible, however, so at the next place I again hired a native to row me ashore. I took an umbrella this time and was weak enough to use it as a shield from the rays of the tropical sun. Arriving on shore, I walked leisurely as far as the postoffice and back to the boat. Then I sat down on the small pier, smoked cigarettes and watched the lazy motions of the natives rowing barges piled with bags of coffee out to the ship and the empty boats back to the shore again. Very few of the other passengers had come ashore at this place.

"My determination to see the country had not quite all vanished when the anchor was dropped at the next port, and once more I hired a native to take me ashore. When we arrived there, I simply sat down in a shady spot and smoked cigarettes. My resentment at the laziness of the natives had all vanished. I said to myself: 'This talk about energetic people coming down here and making money rapidly is all right—for talk. But the man who is able to withstand the enervating influence of this hot and murky air must be made of energy, so that when his vigor was gone he would disappear.'"—New York Tribune.
